Burnet is Australia's leading research institute that focuses on infectious diseases of global significance. Our unique blend of medical research and public health programs are aimed at reducing the impact of diseases such as HIV, hepatitis, malaria, TB, influenza and cancers such as breast and ovarian.

The institute has four centres of excellence – Centre for Virology, Centre for Immunology, Centre for Population Health and Centre for International Health. Burnet plays an important role in education, providing training in laboratory and public health research at the PhD, Honours and Postgraduate level.

- › Talk to staff at one of Australia's top research centres about your career.
- › Take a tour of our laboratories and learn more about the vital work we do at Burnet.
- › Talk to some of our current students – and see what it's really like being a student at Burnet!
- › Refreshments will be provided.
