

Our mission and values

Our mission is to help our students make distinctive, lasting, and significant impact, by building the next generation of psychology leaders that develop, excite, and maintain exceptional services for the community, and meaningfully contribute to policy and advancements in the profession.

We believe our training program will be successful if our students are successful.

Providing excellence in clinical training requires the best students. We think the best students will be drawn to an innovative and challenging training program.

We build our program around that belief. These two parts of our mission reinforce each other and make our program strong and enduring.

We are a values-driven training program. Our values reflect our commitment, collaboration, and engagement in leading clinical research, and are continually updated by changing times. They inform our long-term strategy and how we work with our students on a day-to-day basis.

Adhere to the highest professional standards

- Observe high ethical standards
- Preserve a confidential and respectful training environment
- Maintain an independent identity as a national clinical psychology and clinical neuropsychology provider
- Manage student and University resources cost-effectively

Improve our students learning experience significantly

- Follow a scientist-practitioner approach
- Use our international and national networks to deliver the highest quality research experience to all our students
- Bring innovations in teaching and education into the coursework program
- Build and maintain relationships with students based on trust

Create an unrivaled environment for exceptional students

- Be non-hierarchical and inclusive
 - Sustain a commitment to a duty of care to students
 - Provide mutual development and mentorship among staff
 - Operate as a cohesive team
- 